Submitted entries are assessed by an expert panel of judges in a closed selection process not open to the public. The criteria for the assessment of the entries is stipulated by MESSE. The panel of judges will honour the best entries according to the evaluation criteria. Details of the evaluation criteria are to be taken from the official OUTDOOR INDUSTRY AWARD homepage. At the discretion of the expert panel of judges, the best entries will be honoured with an OUTDOOR INDUSTRY AWARD, the OUTDOOR INDUSTRY AWARD GOLD, - GREEN, respectively the Start-Up AWARD. If a product does not win an award, the participant has no right to receive feedback on the rejected product.

The evaluation process consists of a digital pre-selection round and a judges' panel meeting (final). During the pre-selection round, international experts assess all the entries using a points system. The best entries continue into the final. The six judges for the final were involved in the digital pre-selection round, so they already have an overview of the products. The final (panel meeting) comprises two days of decision-making. The six judges decide together which products should receive an AWARD.

The jury meeting comprises two days of decision-making. The six judges decide together which products should receive an award. The selection process involves four phases. The panel of judges evaluates each individual product in detail. First, there is an orientation phase. This is followed by the initial selection phase, where the judges separate the entries into potential award winners and non-winning products. The third phase is the veto round where the panel makes common decisions. Subsequently, the judges decide on the winning products that best meet the evaluation criteria by majority decision. Representatives of the companies are not admitted to the jury meeting.
